

WHO WE ARE

We believe in the strengths, skills, and potential of all individuals and families to achieve their goals.

Bright Path trains peer human service practitioners, leaders, and funders on research-backed, effective coaching strategies and leadership practices that help equip individuals and teams to set and achieve their goals.

Since 2020, Bright Path has partnered with over 1,000 practitioners representing 100+ organizations to share the foundational components of executive skills-informed coaching through training workshops and long-term implementation support.

Our consulting team has over thirty years of collective instructional design and facilitation experience grounded in adult learning principles, direct services with families, and program leadership.

GROUNDED IN STRENGTHS

We all have goals for our relationships, homes, jobs, and families. Learning about executive skills strengths can help us leverage our strengths and learn how to reduce the obstacles in service of these goals.

For over nine years, our parent organization, New Moms, has used executive skills coaching strategies across its housing, family support, and workforce development programming with young families.

New Moms' program outcomes consistently exceed national benchmarks, families report high levels of satisfaction with the program, and staff embrace the approach as part of a positive, effective workplace culture.

IMPACT SHEET

OUR TRAINING & CONSULTING SERVICES

Bright Path offers several opportunities to learn about executive skills coaching strategies, including:

- Our signature workshop “Harnessing Executive Skills for Goal Achievement” introducing executive skills;
- Our leadership package of training for leadership teams on leveraging executive skills for effective teamwork and staff support
- Our training & implementation package braids together the full suite of executive skills-coaching modules with implementation support for program teams to improve program services and outcomes.

“New Moms provides excellent, interactive training designed to engage helping professionals in the phenomenal framework of Executive Skills Coaching. This experiential training provides evidence-based, applicable information relevant to providers in a range of settings. You'll come away from this workshop with greater self-awareness and confidence in how this framework can help!"
